Trail of the Cell

What does your phone say about you?

MARSHA, I HATE YOU. WE'VE never even met before, but, without fail, you manage to annoy me several times a day.

From what I know of you, you're a fiscally irresponsible whore; it's a shame that you irritate the hell out of me because we seem to have so much in common.

The most obvious trait that we share is our phone number. Actually, it's my phone number now and has been since November, but apparently these 10 digits belonged to you at one point.

A lot of the time it feels like it's still your number, since on most days you receive more phone calls than I do. But it's not your number. Bitch.

I know it might sound like I'm jealous that Marsha's telephone popularity exceeds mine, but the majority of these calls aren't from friends (although enough boys called initially to give me the strong impression that Marsha sleeps around).

No, I'm guessing the reason my current phone number became available was because Marsha, as is her habit, did not pay her cell phone bill.

Everyday, several times a day, bill collectors from across the country call my phone asking for Marsha. At first I tried to ignore them, but the bastards overwhelm my voicemail inbox and leave no room for real messages.

Some of the calls are automated, and there appears to be no way I can ask the company to stop calling my phone at the exact same time every day. I've tried to explain the situation to the human bill collectors that call, but if you've ever dealt with a bill collector you know that human is not the best word to describe them, and they're generally unhelpful people.

I'VE LEFT A TRAIL OF CELL phone numbers in my past, and I'm sure there are people out there who hate someone named Ryan because of the random freaky text messages they receive from my long-ago tricks.

Marsha has made me more cognizant of the lasting thumbprint cell phones leave when we lose them or change numbers; as has the FBI profile my friend Derrick created for the guy whose phone he found on the bus.

Combing through every sent or received text message, through every naked dick and ass picture, through the videos and call history, Derrick became intimately familiar with the phone owner's preferred sexual positions, family problems, health issues, dating drama, childhood fears and more.

After becoming knowledgeable enough to ghostwrite the phone owner's autobiography, Derrick may have returned the phone or may have kept the revealing images and steamy text messages for his own enjoyment.

I felt sorry for the fella that lost his phone, although he did have a cute face and a perky booty.

MY MOM RECENTLY ENTERED cell phone civilization for the first time, and notified me via text message. It's hard to imagine any American over the age of seven never owning a cell phone, but my mom was never in any rush to hop on the wireless wave.

It was mind-blowing to picture my mother on the bus in Chicago, punching away at keys, getting confused by certain features.

But she's got the hang of it, and has been texting away. She's even started abbreviating words like "u" and "2day," and forwarding profanity-laced jokes.

It's comforting to know that my mom is more connected to the age she is living in, that she is still learning new things and discovering new parts of the world.

One thing she hasn't learned is that a text message is not the best vehicle to deliver profound revelations, like: "Ur aunt is a kleptomaniac. Been doing it since Danny and Danielle were kids. Been to jail."

Yeah, she needs to keep practicing. In more ways than one, not everything needs to be said or sent over a cell phone.

Sins of Omission

Small talk can have a big impact

IF YOU'D LIKE TO RE-CREATE the experience of visiting the Midwest, stand in the middle of a football field and turn on a wind machine.

En route to a post-performance party in Kansas, I note turbulent waves suitable for surfing in a hotel swimming pool.

Despite the bracing winds, the area does have its charms. Everyone I've met in Kansas is downright cheerful. It's a genuine placid contentment I can't help but envy.

My costar Jef and I arrive as the guests of honor in a lovely home thematically dedicated to rabbits. Seriously. They're everywhere. Cloth, ceramic, wooden — any material you can imagine. My mother does this with roosters, so I'm not gonna judge.

"Alrighty," says our hostess. "Which one of you is getting married?"

My biography in the show's program mentions I'll be getting hitched when I'm done with the tour. I include this info because I'm very proud of it, and as an unexpected bonus, mentioning weddings makes most of the women in the audience like me before the show even starts. Straight Baby Boomer women love weddings.

"That's me," I say. "I'm very excited. I like your concrete rabbit table. Did you paint it yourself?"

"Tell us all about the wedding! Where is it?"

"Coast of Massachusetts."

"Is that where she's from?" asks another woman, joining us.

"Both from Mississippi," I say, artfully dodging a pronoun.

A CROWD IS FORMING. THEY all start peppering me with questions about my intended bride, her dress, if she's driving me crazy with all this wedding nonsense… I maneuver around every awkward question with evasive dexterity Anderson Cooper and Queen Latifah would envy.

I never lie to these people, not once. I do, however, end up with a few odd sentence constructs, like when I'm asked if my fiancée is an actress, and I say, "No, retail manager." When a woman asks what the bride's name is, I take a long sip of my soda and admire another rabbit until I can take the next question.

Back at the hotel, my sense of accomplishment begins to fade. I confess to Jef that the entire exchange left me feeling deceptive.

"Yeah, no offense, but there's no way I would've done what you did tonight," he says.

"Well, you wouldn't ever have to," I snap. "If you and Lucy ever get married no one's likely to fucking hate you for it."

"Whoa. I don't think anyone in there would've hated you, Topher."

"Really? The gay marriage ban passed in Kansas with 70 percent of the vote. Statistically a good number of those party guests don't believe I have the right to get married. And no matter what moral code those nice people or Miss California or whoever wants to wrap that up in, it is still a kind of hate."

"Then why didn't you just change the subject?"

"Because I didn't wanna be some fag shooting the shit about bunnies with bigots! I've never had the chance to just talk about the wedding and get marital advice from strangers, and I thought it would be nice to feel normal for once."

It's exhausting feeling like I have to be an activist every time I leave the house. I didn't have to sell them on the validity of my life with Preppy. And yet when I decided to remain silent, I ended up feeling like a sleazebag because I never gave them the chance to hear the truth.

MAYBE THE REASON A LOT of Kansans voted against equality is because they hadn't met and liked anyone who was personally affected by it. If I'd told them the reason we're having a destination wedding is because we have to travel to someplace legal, it's possible I could have changed someone's mind.

The day I decided to live my life openly and honestly, I accepted the responsibility of defending it. Sometimes that means standing on the steps of the Capitol, and sometimes that means having the balls to speak up in a Kansas living room.

Next time, I will. My life is worth talking about.

Running of the BUCKS

Gay rugby team gets 'dressed' up for big charity event

ALL OF THE FASHION INDUSTRY IS ABUZZ with news about this season's hottest trends, and word on the street is that the perfect accessory for any purple dress is a full-blown beard, with matching back hair.

The folks behind this fad are the Atlanta Bucks rugby team, who turn a chunk of Midtown into a big, hilarious fashion runway with their 3rd annual "Purple Dress Run" May 2.

"It's going to be an interesting day," says Bucks player Gary Durden, who dressed up as part of a cheerleading quartet at last year's Purple Dress Run.

"It always is good for a laugh, and a lot of crazy looks from people who are in Piedmont Park when they see about 50 to 100 guys run past them in purple dresses," Durden says.

This year's Purple Dress Run kicks off at Blake's on the Park, where participants will enjoy a few drinks before running or strolling around Piedmont Park to the first pit stop, Burkhart's. Once there, they'll play a game of Rugby hot potato, enjoy some more drinks and then embark on the next leg of the 5K, which takes them to Amsterdam for more games and drinks.

So what's the key to completing a 5K while tossing back brewskies?

"Drink lots of water!" says run organizer Patrick Palmer.

THE BUCKS HOPE ABOUT 150 PEOPLE participate in this year's Purple Dress Run, making it the largest run to date. They're reaching out to athletes and couch potatoes, gay and straight folks, and hope no one will shy away from a good time simply because they might not want to wear a purple gown.

"People are intimidated by it because they think they have to wear a purple dress," Palmer says. "But the purple dress is optional, but it is encouraged.

"We have some very fun awards for people who decide that they do want to wear a dress," Palmer adds. "We have the Best Dressed, Best Mess, Most Athletic, and we have a team theme award for teams of four or more."

The entire run and the party pitstops are all intended to be lighthearted fun, but the Purple Dress Run doubles as a fundraiser for the Bucks and their chosen charity, YouthPride.

"We feel like it's a really good organization offering a safe haven for gay youth, and they have a lot of great programs to encourage empowerment for people who identify as gay youth," Palmer says.

The Purple Dress Run takes place May 2 at noon, beginning at Blake's, 227 10th St., www.purpledressrun.org

Evolving Equality

Get your finest attire together for a celebration of the many victories in the gay rights movement over the past year at the annual Human Rights Campaign Dinner & Silent Auction. From marriage in Iowa to Clay Aiken finally coming out of the closet, there's lots to cheer.

The event also honors local and national heros and allies, like keynote speaker Cybill Shepherd.

The Emmy Award-winning actress is receiving HRC's Ally for Equality Award, and says, "It is a sincere privilege to not only receive HRC's Ally for Equality Award, but to spend time and address HRC Atlanta's members during this important time for the LGBT community."

Gay Geeks UNITE!

Vampire slayers, Hogwarts pupils and Trekkies warp into the Holiday Inn this weekend for OutlantaCon 2009, a convention for gay gaming and sci-fi enthusiasts. The intergalactic line-up includes sci-fi author and comics creator Andy Mangels, horror film creator Joe Castro and Jai Husband, who is senior animation director at Turner Broadcasting.

Along with workshops and panels for hardcore gamers and fantasy queens, the convention also hosts more mainstream nerd events like a Scrabble tournament, Uno tables and a search for guitar royalty in a "Rock Band" tournament. Begins Friday at 4 p.m. at Holiday Inn, 2001 Clearview Ave., 770-455-3700, www.outlantacon.org

'Golden' Boy

Furniture guru Mitchell Gold stops by the Atlanta Mitchell Gold + Bob Williams store for a cocktail party and signing of his book about gay spirituality entitled "Crisis." 7 p.m. at Mitchell Gold+Bob Williams, 3081 Peachtree St., 404-869-1770, www.mgbwatlanta.com

Camping with Bears

Usually when you're out in the woods the last thing you want to bump into is a big, burly bear. But you'll be delighted to do so at the 9th annual Bear Mayhem at The River's Edge, which is a gay clothing-optional preserve in north Georgia.

The big boys get in touch with their natural habitat during a weekend of social events and serenity away from big-city life. May 1-3 at The River's Edge, 2311 Pulliam Mill Road NW, Dewy Rose, Ga., 706-213-8081, www.camptheriveredge.com

DJ Oren Nizri

'Hot' Balls

Sit back and scope out the studs in the Hotlanta Volleyball League as they host their annual Spring Smackdown tournament. Nothing like a little competition to get your weekend juices flowing. 8:30 a.m. at Emory University Woodruff PE Center, 600 Asbury Circle, hotlantavolleyball.org

Soarin' Oren

Israeli hottie Oren Nizri returns to Jungle after a breathtaking Atlanta debut at the club earlier this year. The Miami-based DJ/producer brings an April Top Ten list that includes the Soul Avengerz Dancefloor Mayhem Mix of Kid Massive's "Get Busy," the Nick Harvey Tribal Dub of Kristine W.'s "Never" and the Dave Aude Club Mix of Donna Summer's latest hit "Fame." 10 p.m. at Jungle, 2115 Faulkner Road, 404-844-8800, myspace.com/jungle_bradwilliams

Purple Power

Join the jocks from the Atlanta Bucks rugby team as they show off their legs and fashion sense in the 3rd annual "Purple Dress Run" around Midtown. Experience a bar-hopping event like no other, and help raise money for the Bucks and YouthPride. See page 24 for story. Noon at Blake's, 227 10th St., www.purpledressrun.org

Beck on Deck

Resident DJ Brian Beck gets the records spinning and the boys grinding at Heretic, which didn't get a reputation as one of Atlanta's most "friendly" gay bars for nothing! 10 p.m. at Heretic, 2069 Cheshire Bridge Road, 404-325-3061

Drag Hag

Atlanta's got tons of drag queens, but we're about to see which bitches really deserve to wear a crown. In order to find the best of the best, Jazelle is hosting "Atlanta's Drag Race," with auditions beginning today.

Some feelings may be hurt for those who don't bring fierceness, but with Atlanta's queens competing for $5,000 in cash and prizes, it's sure to be entertaining. 10 p.m. at LeBuzz, 585 Franklin Road, 770-424-1337, www.thenewlebuzz.com

Our kind of Guy

Gay characters play a pivotal role in Pearle Cleage's "Blues for an Alabama Sky," a Great Depression period piece about poverty and hope. Former "A Different World" star Jasmine Guy leads the cast in the True Colors Theatre Company's month-long production. Begins May 6 at 8 p.m. at Souhtwest Arts Center, 915 New Hope Road, 404-588-0234, www.truecolorstheatre.org

Joy & Pain

Opposite ends of the spectrum of love

COULD THERE BE ANY BETTER time for love than right now? Spring is hovering over us in a mist that grows increasingly more humid each day, and it's a distinct reflection of how I'm feeling inside. Just like the season, waiting to burst loose.

Or maybe that's how he makes me feel? Maybe it was the magic of our first date: the thundershowers dancing through the bright evening sky and the two of us racing in the rain across the Dogwood Festival where we'd spent the day admiring each other, along with all the art.

It doesn't get more Atlanta than that and honestly neither do we. I suppose this is how he makes all the boys feel. But then I'd be supposing there were others and that's not at all how I feel when he's looking into my eyes. Mostly I feel singled out, chosen, and frankly, a little bit seduced.

Funny that at the same time I'm falling, a close friend called in distress. His emotionally abusive relationship had just turned physical — as they often do. Love has a funny way of not cooperating when people try to pose in its place. It always slips up and drops the curtain to show the players what emotion is really conducting the whole show behind the scenes.

HE ASKED WHAT I THOUGHT he should do, how he could leave, and none of it sounded convincing, not even to him. His voice rang with uncertainty. It was clear his heart was broken and more directly, so was his pride. I just sat there and listened as he retold the whole story until he reached the twisted and complex crossroads he now found himself in.

As he talked, I thought deeply about his situation. I imagined myself in his shoes and didn't have to try hard since I'd been there before. I already knew what it was like to need someone to the point of hurting them if you continue to stay. Words and actions can hurt just as much as fists can, and I'd definitely used both as weapons in the past before.

So I understood in that moment that he wasn't thinking with his heart or even his mind. He was simply reacting. What he thought was love was dangerously something else and the charade couldn't continue any longer than it already had.

Still, it was clear he couldn't yet see that love should heal and not hurt, and that he'd never have it for himself if he kept choosing pain instead.

I also thought about the romance in my own life and how it didn't seem as if it could ever have days like my friend's in its future. The haze was still heavy. It was hard enough to see past each other's face let alone that far into our future, if there would even be one.

After a long silence, he asked me to say something and all I could express was how sad I was about the whole situation. I told him that as much as I wanted to point him in the right direction, none of my solutions would make any difference if he didn't choose them for himself. He had to want to leave, to want real love in his life, and he had to walk away when he was done, not because I was.

I'VE BEEN DONE BEFORE. I'VE been to the point of hurting so much and then finally realizing that what caused the most pain wasn't my circumstances at all. The real culprit was me and the choices I'd made. Right then and there is when I decided to start choosing love; to begin believing that I'm worth something to the world and always deserve to be respected as such.

When we got off the phone I didn't know what choice he was ready to make and was even more confused about what I was ready for as well. Although I know I'd never allow myself to be in that particular situation again, I've learned that even as love heals, it doesn't always feel the best all the time.

But what better time than spring to start healing? What better moment to choose love again, than right now?

need wood

by Woody Miller

Bitch of an Itch

HEY WOODY!

About eight years ago, I had a severe case of jock itch. My dermatologist had prescribed a steroid-based cream and unfortunately, the jock itch went halfway down to my knees. I spoke to a nurse and she said, "keep it dry."

So, I bought myself a hair dryer and blow-dried my groin area after each shower and used lots of talcum powder. The itching is so bad I sometimes wake myself up digging into my balls and groin area trying to get the sensation to go away. Nothing works.

I've been to four doctors and none can figure out what's wrong. Adding to the embarrassment, I sweat like a pig down there. I do all the right things — wear loose underwear, blow-dry my balls after a shower, wear loose-fitting clothing at work. I don't wear underwear at home so I can dangle and get some air.

If I sprinkle powder on before I go to bed, I itch. If I use lotion before I go to bed, I itch. Nothing works. Please help. I can't have sex until I get this sorted out!

— ITCHY & SCRATCHY

DEAR ITCHY:

You're clearly not going to the right doctor. I know I wasn't when I came in complaining about nausea. I said, "Doctor, every morning I wake up, stagger to the bathroom, look in the mirror and want to throw up." He said, "Clearly, there's nothing wrong with your vision."

I said, "You calling me 'ugly?' He said, "Yes." I walked toward the door and said, "Well, if you don't mind, I'd like a second opinion." He said, "Fine. You're boring, too."

My point, and I do have one, other than repeating old vaudeville jokes, is that you're getting bad advice. Here's what you should do:

1. Always try over-the-counter drugs first. Try OTC steroids, like hydrocortisone or antifungals, like Lotrimin, 3-4 times a day for a week or two.

2. Try a drying agent. Like Burow's solution or Domeboro tablets or powder, which you mix with water. You could also make a homemade 1 percent acetic acid version, using a half-cup of white vinegar mixed with 1 pint of water. Use the drying agent at least once daily.

3. NO BLOW DRYERS! Christ, that's like trying to put a fire out with a fan. Just pat dry and allow air-out for a few minutes before putting on those 2-Xist skivvies.

4. See Your Doctor. A good one, I mean. He'll treat it with a stronger steroid or antifungal if it looks like jock itch. If he can't tell what it is (doctors aren't perfect. It's not like they're sex advice columnists) or the treatment fails, he'll do a small "punch biopsy" of the worst looking area and have a pathologist help with the diagnosis by looking at it under a microscope. Then he'll base further treatment on that.

HEY WOODY!

I'm new to the butt thing and notice that most guys who top me don't last that long. How long does the average guy last?

— CLOCKIN' COCK

DEAR CLOCKIN':

Surveys have shown that 62-75 percent of men lasted less than 5 minutes. And get this; a well-known condom manufacturer only tests their products for 50 thrusts!

They're sponsoring the first premature ejaculation event at the London Olympics, figuring it's the only sport where everyone will come first.

bitchsession.com

BITCH ONLINE:
www.bitchsession.com
bitchsession@davidatlanta.com

It's so sad that gay kids have to endure bullying from straight people during their youth, and then endure bitchiness from gay people when they become an adult.

You have no idea how silly you sound calling someone your 'husband' after knowing him for two weeks.

Perez Hilton is an ass. A beauty pageant isn't the place for a politically charged "gotcha" question.

Do drag queens still use duct tape? You'd think there could be technological advances in hiding the goodies.

If it can happen in Iowa, it can happen in Atlanta.
Bitch Boy responds: Do you know the difference between a city and a state?

I can't stand a gay man who drinks beer. Get some sophistication already.

Just because I jog with my shirt off does not make it OK for you to stare me down like a stalker in heat. Does a woman ask to get raped if she wears a miniskirt?

Is this the Dogwood Festival or did they move Pride up to May? There are some fine looking boys walking around here.

Dick tattoos are hot. Dicks with tattoos, not so much.

Miss California: You lost because you gave an incorrect answer, not a politically incorrect answer. Gay people can't choose to marry each other in 46 states in "your land."

Don't fucking smile in my face and ask me how it's going when I constantly hear from other people that you talk about me like trash when I'm not around.

There should be a law forbidding relationships among gay men whose height is more than 18 inches apart. They make really creepy couples.

The weak economy makes me horny!
Bitch Boy responds: Sounds like the headline of a Craig's List escort ad.

Bitch, don't look toward my way in a bar without speaking, and then add me on Facebook a few days later. You had a chance to be my "friend" and you blew it.

If you're such a top then why can at least three of my fingers slide up your ass with the greatest of ease?

Why do gay men wear weave? I'm not talking about drag queens or fem dudes, I'm talking about supposedly masculine guys wearing fake dredlocks and braids. That's not cute.

If President Obama says we no longer condone torture, then why are gay people still fighting to get married? Marriage is torture.

I don't have ripped abs and muscles yet, but that's not an excuse for you to chuckle at me in the gym or act like I don't have a right to use equipment. Everyone has to start somewhere.

Fuck you. "Having computer problems" does not cause you to delete me as a friend on Facebook. Do I look that fucking stupid to you?

The Clermont Lounge is closing! Oh no, please tell me where I can be entertained by Diamond Lil in the future!

Funny how your "working for yourself" isn't as profitable when the nice elderly gentlemen you were hanging with left town. Bitch, you were never independent to begin with.

Is it wrong to have a crush on the guy who always takes my order at McDonald's? I wouldn't mind getting to know him, but I fear he will be eaten alive once we start hanging around other gay people.

Why do you think I'm impressed when you talk about sleeping with women. It's sad that you feel the need to lie about that in order to feel good about yourself, and even sadder if you're not lying. You and vagina mix like oil and water.

Don't ever ask me for money again. I loaned it to you because I assumed you were in an emergency and then I find out it was to get a concert ticket. You need to get your priorities together.

White Water Wash Out

'Hanging' at the amusement park with the boys

IT'S TOTALLY UNTRUE WHAT they say: your life does not flash before your eyes when you're about to die. Actually, it's quite the opposite. The present and your awareness of that specific moment are heighted to a level indescribable to anyone, except to those who have lived through it before.

Or at least that was my experience. But perhaps I'm getting a bit ahead of myself.

It all began rather harmlessly as most tragic and utterly humiliating stories do. Summer had fully erupted all over Atlanta and the heavy heat of August was isolating anyone with any good common sense indoors.

This is not particularly conducive to a population of men who spend every waking minute of free time at the gym perfecting their bikini builds. So when the hot body gays called and invited me to a day at Six Flags White Water Park, I hopped right on it and immediately started trying on all my bathing suits. Then the phone rang again.

"Um, so you know this is like a family park," said my good friend Gwenyth Paltrow. Not the real Gwenyth Paltrow, of course, but my good friend Kenny who's tall and modelesque just like her. We decided we'd only refer to each other as our self-identified supermodel aliases after a long afternoon at his pool with one too many fashion magazines and even more margaritas.

"So, Kate Moss, as much as I love them, your booty shorts with the horse graphic across the crotch are not going to bode well with the locals this time around."

AS MUCH AS I HATED TO agree, Gwenyth had a point. Banana Hammocks and toddlers should never intermingle with each other, especially on a water slide. I sadly packed away the booty shorts and opted for a modest pair of thigh-high madras trunks instead. Still a little on the revealing side, but not enough to incite Rick Warren to launch an anti-gay protest or anything. I think.

The day of the outing, we all arrived perfectly oiled-up and accessorized for a half-naked day in the sun. Everyone had apparently gotten Gwenyth's memo as well and toned down their bathing attire appropriately. Everyone except Gwenyth (of course) who at the last moment decided, "Fuck the families! My lifestyle is my choice and right now my lifestyle absolutely includes spandex!"

And with that, everyone was officially outed and the real fun began.

In mass, we took over waterslide by waterslide, being as loud and as inappropriate as 20 grown men at an amusement park can be. It never crossed my mind even once that my inability to swim would at any point prove problematic.

I just made sure to ask each attendant how deep the crash pool was at the bottom before I barreled down every slide. By the fifth unenthusiastic, "It's only three feet deep," response, I decided everything would be smooth sailing and just stopped asking altogether.

ON A BREAK BETWEEN SLIDES, we all settled to regroup in front of what appeared to be an obstacle course, fully equipped with monkey bars and floating lily pads to aide the way across. You couldn't dream up a scenario more appealing to a bunch of Creatine crazed guys all eager to flex their brute strength in front of one another. One by one, we each swung across the water toward a resting point in the center of the pool.

"Things are going great!" I thought to myself. Six rides down, I'd only choked on a mouthful of water once and even that, nobody noticed. Of course it's then, while catching my breath before swinging back to the other side, I heard a mother yell out to her daughter, "Honey, be careful OK! The water in that pool is 10 feet deep!"

The acid reflux in my throat instantly began to clog my airway. Not only were my arms exhausted from the first trip across, but now I was a good 50 feet from shore with only the possibility of utter humiliation between me and the rest of what was meant to be a rejuvenating day in the park.

How in the hell was I going to get out of this thing alive?

Check out next week's David to read the thrilling conclusion to Michael's White Water adventure.

The new HOTLANTA

As we brace ourselves for the many visitors that flock to our city during the summer months, it's time for locals to quit resting on our laurels and once again live up to our reputation as one of the country's premiere gay meccas.

Atlanta is not just a city. Atlanta is an experience. Atlanta is a state of mind.

We capture the essence of gay Atlanta — the sophistication, the sexiness, and the swagger — in this year's swimsuit issue, which features the season's hottest swimwear from Boy Next Door.

We highlight the best the city has to offer, from the uber chic W Atlanta-Midtown — which is now hosting gay pool parties every Sunday with Social ATL — to nine of the most beautiful but down-to-earth guys who call Atlanta home.

Without further ado, it's time to turn up the temperature in Hotlanta.

OPENING NIGHT
THURSDAY, MAY 28

With Special Guest ERIN DAVIES

On the 11th annual National Day of Silence (April 18, 2007), Erin Davies was a victim of a hate crime in Albany, NY. Because she had a rainbow sticker on her VW Beetle, Erin's car was vandalized with the words "fAg" and "u r gay" placed on the hood and driver's side of her car. Despite the initial shock and embarrassment, Erin decided to embrace what happened and film a documentary about her 58-day cross country tour around the U.S. and Canada in her car, now known worldwide as the Fagbug.

What street corner are you working on and do you freelance or is there a pimp involved?

I don't care if I sleep in Marietta or Midtown, as long as there's a dick me!

One good thing about the bad economy: No more bitches about lesbian tipping habits, because everybody's tipping like lesbians.

Sometimes I think I work with a bunch of middle-aged children!

Perez Hilton represents the worst side of the gay community.
Bitch Boy responds: I thought that honor belonged to Bitch Session.

Re: "What's with the trend of drag performers with real breast implants?" Firstly, real implants is an oxymoron. And secondly, men with breast implants are called transsexuals, not just drag queens. Free your mind, the rest will follow.

To the breeder who said gays don't need equal rights to marry when we go around sleeping with everyone: Maybe it's not being able to have equal rights to marry that has instilled the notion in homos to just be sluts. Why grow emotionally attached to one person when you can't make life decisions for them legally?

If I hear the phrase "social networking" one more time, I'm going to vomit right in your keyboard!

Since you want to treat every relationship as though it were a business transaction, wouldn't it be just easier to get a prostitute?

Who on earth would let someone piss in their mouth? You can spray my face with pee all day, but don't put that squirty dick in my mouth and say "Swallow it!"

Wanda Sykes is my hero! She finally gave Rush Limbaugh a taste of his own meds! Oh wait, he already tastes his own meds dozens of times per day.

The law says I have to let women in my bar, but there's no law that says I have to serve them. You see how fast they leave when I serve the men around them but don't serve their straight girlie friends! And I also allow the men to use the ladies room. And don't be shy about peeing on the seat!
Bitch Boy responds: I appreciate being able to use the ladies' room, but I hope your karma has you filing for bankruptcy soon, you hateful bastard.

Certain people leave their belongings in gym lockers and don't lock them. If I come upon your stuff while looking for an empty locker I am going to steal something from you just on principal. I am also going to crap in your shoes.

I hope you bitches are happy with the Democratic deluge you thought would bring everything you wanted quickly. You were taken and your votes were used yet again. Wake up or at least hold the ones you voted for accountable.

OK, for all you poz dudes who think now you can let the good times roll, still some reality: You can get drug-resistant HIV strains, syphilis, gonorrhea, warts, herpes and other un-ladylike things. You still have to exercise some control!

I'm sorry I laughed at you while you were talking dirty to me while I was sucking your dick. It was just the irony of you acting so tough and hard, while your dick in my mouth was anything but hard.

So a certain barback from a certain bar was fired for gossiping about the personal lives of his coworkers, manager and the owner of the bar. Funny how you have been fired from every job you ever had. Karma is a bitch honey!

Instead of using water, it would be nice if some real men participated in the waterboarding of Sean Hannity. We could all relieve our bladders on him and turn him into a pee fairy.

It's not that I'm opposed to bars, just the dumb ass conversations that take place in them. I'm not trying to start a book club, but can't we talk about something besides Top Model or how many ridiculously young "hot" guys you've fucked.
